DETAILED ACTION

1. The Amendment filed on 12/29/03 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.
3. Claims 2, 4-6, 9-12, and 14-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Witjes in view of Neal.

Witjes discloses the invention substantially as claimed including a retaining mechanism (28). However, it appears that Witjes lacks a level adjusting mechanism for the table (3). In that regard, Neal teaches a support table (D) having a level adjusting mechanism (e.g., d, d¹) that adjusts relative position between the between the support table and the rotary cutters (C, C) in the vertical direction for the purpose of maintaining a desired depth of cut for the rotary cutters depending on the thickness of the material being cut. Thus, it would have been obvious to the ordinary artisan at the time of the instant invention to provide the device of Witjes with the level adjusting mechanism as taught and suggested by Neal for the reasons stated supra.

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments filed 12/29/03 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

In response to Applicant's basic argument that Witjes in view of Neal does not render the claimed invention obvious, this argument is traversed. As shown in Fig. 1 of

Art Unit: 3724

Neal, the features as reading on the support table (D, D) are mounted for adjustment in that view, i.e. the thickness view perpendicular to the axes of the saws. In the orientation shown, they support the workpiece from below. Even if this is not the case, at the very least Witjes already includes a support table supporting the workpiece from below in the same orientation as shown in Fig. 1 of Neal, and Neal has been applied to teach the obviousness of the level adjusting mechanism. Applicant's arguments to the contrary is tangential to the issue at bar.

In response to Applicant's basic argument that Witjes lacks the retaining mechanism, this argument is not well taken. The "joints" are referring to the bends in the bar (28) as opposed to manipulating joints as Applicant appears to argue. Thus, contrary to Applicant's contentions, the retaining mechanism of Witjes includes the claimed motion. Even if Witjes lacked such a feature, it is not a patentably distinct feature.

In response to applicant's argument that there is no suggestion to combine the references, the examiner recognizes that obviousness can only be established by combining or modifying the teachings of the prior art to produce the claimed invention where there is some teaching, suggestion, or motivation to do so found either in the references themselves or in the knowledge generally available to one of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Fine, 837 F.2d 1071, 5 USPQ2d 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1988) and In re Jones, 958 F.2d 347, 21 USPQ2d 1941 (Fed. Cir. 1992). In this case, the motivation stems from the combination of references. While Witjes includes adjustment of the knives themselves, adjustment of the table itself, as taught and suggested by Neal, also provides further control for properly orienting the knives as desired. Thus, contrary to

Applicant's assertions, the modification proposed by the Examiner will not destroy the teachings of Witjes. It will add to operability of the device.

Conclusion

5. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
